In the annual report of the New York Chamber of Commerce upon the wool trade of the United States, the Economist reads that the year 1881 was a disappointing one for all who handled the raw material, but a satisfactory one to its consumers. The stocks carried over from the previous year were large, both of foreign and of domestic, but this did not deter buyers from keen competition at the places of growth. Chear money and the prospects of good trade were the induce-ments; but a bad harvest and dear money soon checked the expected activity. Losses were made both on old and new stocks, which were steadily pressed for sale throughout the year, so that there was at the close of the year an average decline of 10 per cent, on all fine weels. On the other hand, manufacturers did very well. The raw material was cheep, and the consumption of their products large, at moderate profits. There was no excess of production. The stock of goods in first hands at the close of the year, the report core on the sar, is probably smaller report gots on to say, "is probably smaller than ever known in the history of the woollen industry of this country. It is, perhaps, eafe to say that a length the demand equals the supply, and that there i now no excess of woollen machinery. Stocks of cloth-ing wools are also moderate, and the country continues pre-eminently prosperous, and capable of a greater consumption than ever of manufactured products." Ap-pended to the report is the following estimate of the supply and consumption of the raw material during the year:—Stock of wool in all markets, January 1, 1881, 55.347.370lb.: foreign imported in 1881, 53,010,757lb. domestic clip in 1881, 290,000,000lb.; total supply fo 1881, 508,358,1271b.; deduct stock on hand, Januar 1. 1882, 46,273,900fb.; consumption in 1881; 352,084,227lb., of which the United States produced 290,000,000lb., and imported, ferrigm, 62,084,227lb.

THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1882.

In the city and in various parts of the suburbs there have been an unusual number of burglaries of late, but there have been remarkably few captures. Some of the thefts have been daring enough, but the thieves have escaped detection. Within not many months no less than three suburban railway stations have been broken into, and of course robbed, but in every instance the or two instances there was reason to believe that the ways of the place were familiar to the thieves, but although the marauders may not have been strangers, they have proved the police. It has been shown that suburban railway stations can be entered at night, and be emptied of their contents in the easiest possible manner. At such a station as Newtown, a deliberately planned theft ought not to be an easy business. At our larger stations hands are employed by night as well as by day. It should be a matter of some difficulty at any hour of the night to break open the doors of a large station-house, to en and to clear an iron safe, and then to get securely away. But it has recently appeared that this can be done, and done impunity. In several instances it has been shown that houses can be robbed as success fully and as safely as railway stations. Some of the burglaries, both in the suburbs and in the city, have been remarkably audacious. But though a few of the burglars have fallen into the hands of the police, most of them are still at large. It is, of course, easy to exaggerate danger which a dozen or so of successful burglaries create. In matters of this kind people have generally far more fears than they have any occasion for. When the size of the population, the number of the police, the value of the property exposed, and the manner in which a section of the population is cenred, are taken into the account, the wonder is not that crime is so prevalent, but that it is so rare. After all, criminal violence is of comparatively infrequent occurrence. The great bulk of the population close their doors in the evening, and go to rest at night without a sense of personal danger, and there is every reason why they should do so. On the continent of Europe, in France, for example, murders are three times more numerous than in Great Britain, assaults and robberies with violence about twice as numerous. In France the number of criminals under the surveillance of the police is reckoned as at least ten times the number in England. But notwithstanding all this, it is said that there are more habitual criminals in England than in France, and the number of thefts is about the same in both countries. In both countries. also, the absence of social and domestic restraint, the growing desire for luxury, the dissemination of licentious literature, and it may be added, the decline of religious conviction, tend to multiply thieves and swindlers. Further, what seems to be decay of manliness is followed by thieves and swindlers of a skulking description. There is a class of midnight prowlers who are not nore anxious to pocket their neighbours' belongings than to save their own skins. It is to be feared that in the large centres of population thieves of this kind are upon the increase. It is certainly held that they are more numerous than they were in England, and there is too much reason to fear that the same may be said of these colonies. It is also significant that some of the most udacious of the thieves who have come under the notice of the police, both in Sydney and Melbourne, have been mere lads. One or two of the gangs that have been caught in the suburbs have consisted of boys, and it sisted of boys also. It is said enough to ind that in some instances lads enter upon a career of thiering against the will and to the grief of their parents; but it is more and the control of disgusting things besides. It is more of disgusting things besides. would probably be found that the gangs without aid. It is not encouraging to find that educational progress and Christian zeal are doing very little to check the criminal tendencies of certain classes of society; but there is too much reason to fear that the fact must be accepted. Failing the clergy and the schoolmasters, the public must look to the police. In the present state of society, at least as long as criminality can be successfully practised, there will be criminals. Immunity from punishment tends to make thieves bolder, and it tends to make them more numerous. Every swindler that gets off offers an inducement to somebody else to begin a career of swindling. It is the business of the police to see that swindlers do not get off. Policemen are employed to catch criminals. They have of course a good deat case to do, but this is their principal office. It is complained, however, that it is the office in which they signally fail. The grievance in many parts of the world just now is, that while the police are able to clear a crossing or to disperse a crowd they cannot detect crime. No doubt much of the grumbling at the police is un-reasonable, as grumbling generally is; at the reasonable; as grambling generally is; at the same time it cannot be overlooked that the same time it cannot be overlooked that the scape of a single gang of criminals, however escape of a single gang of criminals, however small, is a serious thing, that for the capture of criminals the public liave a right to look to the police, and that thieves are in the habit the police, and that theves are in the habit of caraping detection a great deal oftener than of according detection a great deal oftener than of according detection a great deal oftener than of a scaping detection a great deal oftener than of a scaping detection a great deal oftener than of a scaping detection a great deal oftener than of a scaping detection a great deal oftener than of that the lesson which has mittee £200 being appropristed to the relief of the witter is and that the lesson which has been given to dishouses traders in the one of Glasgow and the directors of the latter fund both for the substantial aid and sympathy shown by the inhabitants of Sydney, New South Wales.

s good for the community. some extent, at least, may be fairly attributed to the Police Department; but the inefficiency of the police is not a matter for which they can be held responsible. The evil is to be traced first of all to causes over which the police authorities have no control. To begin with, the police are badly selected, badly paid, and, as a natural result, badly manned. The idea is that almost anybody will do for a policeman, anybody, that is, who may happen to be dragged forward by a member of Parliament. There can be no doubt that, under the existing system of selection, a large number of men get into the police is not a matter for which they can be provided in the police is not a matter for which they can be held responsible. If the police force is to do what may be reasonably expected from it, it must have a larger proportion of good men, and before there will be better men there must be better pay. The com-munity is not much the safer for a class of noticemen who cannot catch thieves.

rities of Victoria are dealing with one of the largest class of dishonest traders should furnish a lesson to the same authorities here. A few days ago a wine and tobacco merchant, living at Stawell, was charged with having counterfeited and forged the trade marks of the wine known as V.D., or Vergniaud claret, and Bordsaux claret No. D. In this case the fraud was not even cleverly executed, for it was stated that for claret that was worth from 80s, to 90s. a dozen the merchant supplied colonial wine that was not fit to drink. A commoner form of fraud, perhaps, was exposed at the Hotham Police Court last week. In this instance a publican was convicted of selling as schnapps the contents of a bottle which contained two-thirds schnapps and one-third J.D.K.Z. gin, the bottle which contained the mixture bearing the name of Wolfe and Co. The publican's defence was the very natural one that he could not sell the genuine article at the price usually charged, and that a mixture of schnapps and gin suited his customers quite as well as schnapps alone. It is possible also that the publican honestly believed that the one was as good as the other-a belief as to which opinions may differ. There is a feeling among licensed victuallers of a certain class that the Acts which regulate the transactions of their trade are unjust and cruel, and that an unrighteous law may be righteously set aside. There can be no deny ing that the forging of labels and of trade marks, which is so frequently complained of and exposed, is one result of the enormous duties which are attached to liquors of nearly every description. Extravagantly high tariffs will lead to evasions in some shape or other. On the side of the publican sells gin for schnapps, and of the wine merchant who palms of inferior colonial wine as expensive Bordenux, it may also be pleaded that adulteration is the rule if not a necessity in other branches of trade as well as in the licensed victualler's branch, that if drinks are adulterated other things are adulterated also. If close investigation were made it might turn out that much that passes for Bordeaux is no more Bordeaux than the stuff which was offered as such by the wine merchant at Stawell.

Not long ago a Melbourne audience was told that 95 per cent. of French wines are consumed in France, only 5 per cent. leaving that country for any part of the world whatever. If this be the case, the quantity of real French wine that reaches the antipodes may be easily imagined. Since the failure of the French vineyards, much of the French wine that is consumed in France is a manufacture some of it from grapes that never grew in France, and some from anything but grapes. Nor will anybody conclude that the trade in deception is confined to clarets. The choicer delicacy of champagne, we are told, is occasionally a preparation of nothing short of vitriol. Not long ago it was stated that in a single city—nowhere near the champagne country—40,000 dozen of champagne was manufactured every month from petroleum. The temperance man will, of course, congratulate himself that he gives no countenance to a trade that is so honeycombed with falsehood, but it may be doubted whether there is nearly as much adulteration practised in con-nection with wine as in connection with tea. If the one is compounded of petro-leum and vitriol, the other, according to all

It is not become the property of should not be punished. of the State to protect honest traders, and if it is to do this it must punish cheats. its business to protect the unsuspecting con-sumer as well as the honest producer, and it can only do so by providing penalties which will prevent the selling of counterfeit articles for real. There is no reason in the world why if people want mixtures publicans should not sell them. There is no law against selling compounds of gin and schnapps—the law is against selling the compound as the genuine article. There is no law against selling inferior colonial wine, cation. a great deal of this sort of thing has been done in New South Wales. For the benefit of those who may see nothing objectionable in such frandulent practices as those which have been exposed in the neighbouring colony, it may be pointed out that the Trade Marks Act of New South Wales is as stringent as that of Victoria, and that the lesson which has of escaping detection a great deal oftener than will force itself upon the private establishgood for the community.

It is, of course, easy to blame the police marks with which dishonest dealers so fre-

Mr. BENT has withdrawn from office, pending an inquiry into certain transactions in which he was interested, and the Acting-Commissioner, Mr. interested, and the Acting-Commissioner, Mr. Gravis, has resolved, it seems, to take a directly opposite course. According to a late telegram, instead of endeavouring to arrive at a friendly understanding with our Government upon a fair basis, which would bring the unhealthy competition to an end, and enable both colonies to get the profit they are entitled to upon the carriage of wool, he is going to push the competition to further extremes by making further reductions on wool from stations on the Murrumbidgee. Mr. Graves' mother is, "pull devil, pull baker," and, of course, the tendency of action upon that principle on the one side is to promote corresponding action on the other. But how far is this contest to go! How long will the wool-growers of Vicgot How long will the wool-growers of Vic-toria be content to let New South Wales wool be carried to Melbourne at lower rates than those charged for their own I and what amount of loss will the people of Vietoria generally be willing to incur for the sake of securing this wool trade to Melbourne? On our aide also it is to be asked. Melbourne? On our side also it is to be asked, how far are we prepared to continue the course of rendering a highly valuable service to the Southern squatters without obtaining a fair return for it? If the Parliaments of the two colonies did their duty, they would tell their respective Ministrius to endeavour to settle the matter upon a more rational foundation.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

That the second reading of the Arrears of Rent in Ireland Bill should be passed in the House of Commons by a majority of 112, and that the Repression of Crime in Ireland Bill should pass a second reading also by a considerable majority, affords evidence that both sides of the Chamber regard the state of Ireland as a national and not as a party question. Until after the release from prison of the ignoble six hundred, and the terrible murders in the Phonix Park, Dublin, there was reason to suspect that the Teries were allying themsaless with the Irish members for party purposes. Now they seem more inclined to sympathize with the Government in its present unenvisible position of having to provide from he legislation for a country in which lawlessness and crime are rampant. There has, of course, as was but natural, been strong opposition to both bills, but that opposition has not been characterized by factiousness, for mother of the leading principle of both measures have now been affirmed, and considering the drastic character of the one and the extreme liberality of the other, the Government may fairly be congratulated on its successes so far. And besides, the character of Mr. Rust was a sufficient guarantee that he would allow nothing improper to cour in any place where he had authority or control. Mr. Dillou said that he had objections to improper to coour in any piace where he has an untorry or control. Mr. Dillion said that he had objections to dancing salcons, either at or near a public-house, as both from personal observation and information from others he found that their teachency was the promotion of the larrivin element, and had in many instances been productive of very great mischief. Mr. Gamaon said that the expense of getting to Sandringham would of itself be a bar to the presence of larrivins. It would involve an expenditure of something like a pound to get to Sandringham, whilst a single shilling would suffice to convey them to the ordinary pienic grounds and dancing places. THE GARDEN PALACE.

THE GARDEN PALACE.

The Garden Palaco was the sease of a grand temperance gala, under the united patronage of the Sons of Temperance, the New South Wales Alliance, the Good Temperance, the New South Wales Alliance, the Good Temperance, the Rechabites, and Bands of Hope too numerous to particularize. The bands of hope, juvenile templars, and invenile abstainces of every name had the place pretty well to themselves in the fore part of the day, and for whom suitable sports and other provisions had been prepared, and in the superstand of the representating of the refreshments, the singers began to gather towards the organ gallery, and about 3 o'clock there were probably as many as 600 boys and rirls and a good number of adult ladies and gratierous to engage, under the direction of Mr. P. D. M'Cormick, in a concert, the programme of which consisted of no fewer than twenty piecce. Mr. A. Massey was accompaniet, Mr. G. Gedfrey organist, and a brass band was in attendance under the direction of Mr. J. Douglas. With one exception the sflair went off very creditably, and several encores were called for; and that exception unfortunately occurred in what was expected to be the chef direction but the direction of "Hands all round." The colo was sung with Mr. A. Fairfax's usual power and taste; but the chorus, also in which the 500 voices were "sided" by the brass band and the organ, were simply executating. The attendance was good, notwitheleanding the unfavourable state of the weather and the other numerous attractions.

MELBOURNE, WENNEDAY.

The Melbourne Hunt Club Autumn meeting took plece
at Flemington to-day, and, netwithstanding the uninviting weather and the numerous counter attractions, there was a very fair attendance. The following are the results:— HANDICAP BURDLE BACE.

Redlight, Napoleon, Vanguard, and Dauphin also started Won by two lengths. Napoleon and Dauphin fell. My Lord got first away, followed by Savage and Mulatto, the former of whom shortly went to the front, Dueletter and Queen May going very well. Verdure then made a rush, and after a hard struggle best Squireen by a length, Mulatto a length and a half behind.

OPEN STERPLECHASE. Bayard, Skylark, and Euclid also started. CORINTHIAN PLAT RACE.

From our Brisbane correspondent we learn that the regating at Maryborough drew a large attendance. The Champion Gig Race was won by two lengths by Manyborough Junior Four, the Brisbane beat being second. The Maryborough Seniers were distanced, owing to lack of training. The race was decided by the eleverness of the consessin of the Brisbane crew, and they were enthusiastically cheered their style being much admired.

On Saturday evening Mr. D. H. Harkins and a well selected company, comprising several of the leading members of the late London Comedy Company, will open in Burmand's comedy. The Colonel." About two years ago Mr. Burnand, while on the look-out for attractons for the Prince of Wales Theatra, London, conceved the Live of founding an esthetic comedy 'a an incident in one of the plays then running in Paris. He carried out the plan thus initiated, and the result was an unqualified success, for the cornedy has held the boards of the Prince of Wales Theatrs for over a year, and during the greater part of that time two mathrées a weak were given in addition to the ordinary evening performances. The play has the further distinction of being the only one which the Queen has witnessed since the death of the Prince Consort. Mr. Harkins played the comedy to large sudiences for six weeks at he Opera House, dislocures, and the same company will appear in Sydney, he wast including Mr. Harkins, Mass Blan he Stammers, Mrs. Stamoers, Mr. Wybert Reeva, Mr. Frank Cates, and other capable performers. The whole of the somery and furniture will be entirely new, and of first-class character, he scenery being from the brush of Mr. Gorgios, which alone is a grunantee of its excellence. Mr. Harkins, and the agent, Mr. J. V. Dodge, are in Sydney, persocally superinteeding the preparations for suitably mounting the comedy.

Our New Zealand telegram of last night mentions that Mr. J. C. Williamson opened a season at the new Opera Hone, Auckland, yesterday, with "Pattence." Their was an immense attendance, and the opera was a great success.

The Anctioneer has soldom had the opportunity of submitting a subdivision of property in the above locality at so opportune a time as the present. The Sydney Morning Herald frew attention to the erection going on at Randwick of a large number of engine-sheet and workshops, for the USS OF the TRANWAY DEPARTMENT, and points out that at those works a CONSIDERABLE NUMBER of ARTIZANS must dud IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT. The above sale will enable the workman to secure a SUITABLE HOME, and as the same newspaper says, avoid being "compelled to return every night into the crowded city, instead of enjoying the fresh and healthful breezes of Randwick." The authorities do not see their way to ERECT COT-TAGES for their employees, so that it remains for the latter, with that AUSTEALIAN SELF-RELIANCE which distinguishes them as a body, to remember that Providence helps those who BELP THEMSELVES. The drive along the Frenchman's-road is decidedly the rettlest about Sydney, and anyone who secures an allotment is in favourite and tram-connected suburb will not regret it is AT LITHOGRAPHS can be obtained.
